Test Development and Advisory Committees

Since 1971, the ABP has established test committees for the various areas of pathology. The committees consist of ABP trustees, as well as other pathologists and physicians who are recognized experts in the various disciplines. In 2001, the role of these committees was expanded to include not only a test development function but also an advisory function for the Board. The current non-trustee members of the test development and advisory committees are:
